

The Saturday Evening Post.

VOLUME I.

PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 5, 1822.

NUMBER 62.

PRINTED BY ATKINSON & ALEXANDER,
No. 53 MARKET STREET,
Four doors below Second st.—north side.

CONDITIONS.

The Saturday Evening Post is published once a week, at two dollars per annum, payable half yearly in advance, or THREE DOLLARS if not paid before the end of the year.
Subscribers will have the privilege to insert an advertisement, throughout the year, to the extent of half a square, at two dollars additional, with an allowance for alterations. Non-subscribers pay an usual price. A wish to discontinue the paper must be made known before the expiration of the time subscribed for, or the engagement will be considered good for another six months.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

There is a charm attached to every thing connected with the approach of Winter and the departure of Summer, which has often led me into the recesses of the forest, to muse upon its bright but fading beauties. It is like the feeling with which we gaze upon the features of the departed, conscious that the separation is but the harbinger of a glorious resurrection.

When Summer's bright unsullied ray,
Has lost its melting warmth and fire,
How grand those splendours fade away,
How swift those scenes of bloom retire.

From groves where Flora's step might linger,
Each sylvan beauty seems to fade,
And pleasures sketched by Fancy's finger,
Have lost their charms in Autumn's shade.

This path, by Summer strewed with roses,
No longer boasts its wild perfume,
And yonder bower where Love reposes,
Must mourn its dearest flow'et's doom.

But there's a hope the heart may cherish,
When Beauty flies on hasty wing,
Though her bright eye may see them perish,
These fairy scenes will bloom in Spring.

STANZAS.

To her who said "Remember me."

Nay, ask not to remember thee,
Since every true worth can give,
Has bound thy dearest name to me,
Which in my thoughts shall ever live.

Should death first call thee to thy doom,
My breast will be thy cemetery—
My heart shall be a living tomb,
Inscribed, in memory of thee.

HORATIO.

The following is among the beautiful songs in the new play of the Law of Jaxa, by Colman:—

Low in the vale, where a streamlet ran,
And under a tree reclined,
A pilgrim measured the wit of man,
By thinking on woman-kind.

Of a woman has killing eyes, he cried,
And a soft, bewitching smile,
With a thousand, thousand charms beside,
Our senses to beguile!

Mark every glance that confirms her sway:
Note, too, each dimple's power;
Look on her lips how the young love plays,
Like bees on the lipped flower!

Go on her bosom of sweets! and take
This truth for a constant rule—
Enslaving woman can always make
The wisest of men a fool.

SONG—By T. Campbell.

Drink to her that each loves best,
And if you nurse a flame
That's to be but to her mutual breast,
We will not ask her name.

Enough, while memory tranced and glad
Paints clearly the fair,
That each should dream of joys he's had,
Or yet may hope to share.

Yet far, far hence be jest or boast
From hallowed thoughts so dear;
But drink to them that we love most,
As they would love to hear.

THE SOLITAIRE—No. V.

"There is nothing more difficult to attain, or so necessary to possess as perfect good breeding."

CHRISTIANITY.

It is a matter of no trifling moment to every person, be his situation in society what it may, to be esteemed well bred. For the benefit of those who are anxious to acquire that character, a few remarks may perhaps prove serviceable.—Despise punctuality—it is beneath the notice of a gentleman, and although you pledge your word "over and over again," it is little and mean to comply with it.

As conscience will only be a "stumbling block," it will be best for you to dispose of it, whenever a generous price is offered. Impudence is an indispensable article: provide yourself with a large quantity, which liberally use upon all occasions. It will enable you to perform wonders, and without its sovereign aid, in vain will you seek for admiration.

It is by no means necessary that your pericranium be crammed with that outlandish article called "useful knowledge." Let others of less consequence lumber their brains with the "spurious trash,"—gentlemen need no such paltry assistance. If you happen to get in a dispute, never retract a little from any thing you advance, though you know yourself in the wrong; no—persist in your argument, back it with the force of strong vociferation, and engross all the talk; you then prevent your antagonist from a possibility of replying, and until an argument is replied to it always stands good.

Assume a pompous air, talk loud, boast of your domestic expenses and make a great show; this has an effect upon "the natives," excites their admiration, and never fails to procure you a "great name." The Clergy are always a fair object of ridicule—as public characters, every gentleman has a right to canvass their professional affairs.

In company we very often meet with some kind people, who have an admirable way of saving one the trouble of proceeding in a story, by undertaking to furnish the audience with the remainder of it, as soon as a person has made a beginning. Now this is true urbanity and certainly proceeds from a desire of being serviceable.

THE PILGRIMS.

In 1817, a group of singular people, called Pilgrims, passed through Pennsylvania to the westward. They were composed of men, women and children, clad like a second company of Gibonites, and looked like the rag end of a hurricane. Their leader, who was styled a Prophet, it is said was formerly an inhabitant of Lower Canada. Having been afflicted with a long spell of sickness, he betook himself to the practice of frequent prayer; and finding by this exercise his inner man much strengthened, and his health also improved, he began to have, as he thought, very extraordinary illuminations, which he communicated to his neighbours who visited him. Some of them were converted to his persuasion; and when his health was restored, he set out with his followers, to travel in quest of a land flowing with milk and honey, where he assured them, every thing that was necessary for their sustenance and convenience, would be amply provided, without the agency of labour and toil. As they travelled through the country they availed themselves of the charity of the benevolent, and made use of such opportunities as were afforded for the promulgation of their doctrines. Some were converted, joined in the procession, and went with them. At Mount Pleasant in the state of Ohio, they tarried several days; a person who had an interview with them there, enquired why they did not wash themselves and their clothing, and make a more decent appearance. Their answer was, that they had been as decent in these respects as other people, but that they were commanded to appear in their present character, for an outward sign of the inward condition of Christian professors. One article of their creed was, a literal acceptance of that passage in the New Testament which says, "Except ye be as little children, ye cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven."—In order to fulfil this doctrine, we are told that they harmonized with each other, and some of the men in imitation of little boys, were seen riding corn stalks or sticks, for horses; and other childish amusements were noticed among them. The story of the Prophet having borrowed the wife of one of his followers is not so well authenticated as to be mentioned as a fact.

The following extract of a letter written by a friend at Waynesville, dated 3d mo. 9, 1818, furnishes some interesting particulars, concerning these curious mortals.

"A company of strange people called Pilgrims, came into Waynesville on Second-day, the 23d of last month—got into an empty house, and in the evening had a meeting in a wheelwright's shop. Several of them preached; and many who went to hear them, seemed to think well of their doctrine. On Third-day, the town was all in a stir; almost every body going to see them. Fourth day was our monthly meeting, and after the business was gone through, a request was opened for the Pilgrims to have liberty to hold a meeting in our meeting house.—Some were very much opposed to it; finally a committee was appointed to visit them, and invested with power to grant or deny, as they should think best, after fathoming their mission. The request was granted by the committee, and a meeting accordingly appointed at 3 o'clock next day. There were about twenty of them altogether, men women and children. The men had long beards, and the women short hair. The greater part of both sexes, were intolerably ragged, dirty and greasy, and some had their coats on wrong side out. They wore woollen caps on their heads, a strip of coarse linen on the back, reaching from the shoulder to the wrist, and round the waist a belt of sheepskin, or some other sort of raw hide with the hair on. In this kind of rigging, five men and two women marched to the meeting house, and up into the high gallery. Three of the men, and both the women preached. While one was preaching, another made a long humming sound, beginning with wo—and ending in the sound of a double o, nearly resembling the cry of a great number of locusts at a distance. They declared themselves to be the forerunners of a second coming of Christ, that the greater part of professors had fallen, and they were sent to gather the elect. One of the men, we are told, had been a Methodist minister; he preached loud and fast, and hammered it in with both hand and foot. I apprehend its equal seldom, if ever, graced a Quaker gallery before. On Seventh-day morning, they left the town, and a Friend accompanied them to Lebanon. He tells us, they were joined there, by another company of the same sect, and that they had a meeting next day, the greatest he was ever at."

A gentleman who saw the Pilgrims at Cincinnati, informed the writer of this sketch, that their number amounted to 70 or 80 persons. He says they were not deranged in their intellects—they preached well and appeared to be a harmless people. One peculiarity he observed among them, they always took their drink through a quill; but he could not ascertain their reasons for it, only that it was their order. Some rude people abused the Prophet, by taking him on the river Ohio, and setting him adrift in an old boat; but he was brought on shore again by others who were more humane. The same gentleman informs, that the whole company pursued their journey down the Ohio, in search of the good country which the Prophet had taught them to believe, they should certainly find—he said that Providence directed their steps, and he should infallibly know the place when they arrived at it. At length their pilgrimage came to an end; for the Prophet took sick and died some distance below Cincinnati; and his followers dispersed, some of them returned to Lebanon and joined the Society of Shakers, and others went elsewhere. The story of the Prophet getting possession of all the money belonging to the company, and making his escape with it, appears to have been a fabrication.

This system of religion, as far as we are acquainted with it, exhibits various traits of singularity, and yet perhaps not more than might be found in some other eccentricities of the human mind on the same subject. He dates his revelation, like some other founders of religious sects, in a spell of bodily indisposition. And how often do we see that fevers and other disorders produce a partial delirium in the mind, and it appears probable that from such a disorganization, may arise many strange ideas, which being mixed and blended by a considerable share of rational understanding yet remaining, result in practices different from those of mankind in general. These people, like Nebuchadnezzar's image are partly sound and partly broken—where the former quality seems to have the preponderance, it exhibits many excellent and incontestable truths, how liable are weak minds to be dazzled with these, and instead of making a discrimination between the truth at one time and the error at another, the whole is swallowed without hesitation. Hence it is, that every system of religion, however strange, has its followers, and when we consider that many strange doctrines and tenets, are the result of minds that are partially deranged, and of ignorance in those who become converts to such doctrines and tenets, we think ourselves justified in extending over them the mantle of charity, so long as they behave with civility and do not encroach upon the harmony of civil society and the good of the commonwealth.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

THE LEVEE OF THE GRACES.

At the time appointed at the adjournment of the meeting on the evening of the 19th inst. the society again assembled at the Hall, to appoint officers for the ensuing year, and also to receive the report of the committee.

After the regular ballot the following named persons appeared duly elected:—FRANCIS FENNY as President, REBECCA RESTIVE and TANTHA TROLOP as Presidettes, with Gilbert Gosling and Harriet Hairbrain as Secretaries.

After the officers had been regularly installed in their respective departments, Ben Brainless, on behalf of the committee appointed at our late meeting, begged leave to report, that they had met sundry times in the prosecution of the duties assigned them, and they now had the pleasure of presenting a Code of Laws for the government of the Society, whose designation, with all due deference to the opinion of their fellow-members, they had chosen "the Levee of the Graces."

The Secretary proceeded to read the regulations presented by the committee, when Fanny Flirt interrupted him, by moving, "that we postpone hearing them for the present," and although the president declared "such a proceeding incorrect, as the society would be acting under laws of whose tenor and import they were entirely ignorant," still the female part of the meeting carried the motion in despite of his high authority.

Solomon Cynic, a gentleman verging fast towards the grand climacteric, "begged leave to call the attention of the meeting to the excessively immodest (as he called it) manner in which the Ladies now wore the body of their dresses. In some instances (he continued,) to the best of his belief there was no part of the dress to be discerned above the waist of the wearer. In this particular, (he said,) a reform was absolutely necessary, and he trusted, thro' the discretion and delicacy of the society it would be enforced. He concluded by introducing the following lines, which, in accidentally turning the leaves of an old magazine, struck his attention—

If Eve, in her innocence, could not be blamed,
Because going naked, she was not ashamed;
Who ever views the Ladies, as Ladies now dress—
That again they grow innocent, sure will confess.
And that artfully too, they retaliate the evil.
By the devil once tempted, they'd now tempt the devil."

The uproar in the levee now became tremendous—every lady in the chamber rose in a fury, and a noise only equalled by the vociferation of Babel, swept thro' the room. The worthy chairman in vain exerted his lungs to repress the tumult, and after several ineffectual attempts he declared the subject postponed until our meeting in the following week, and dissolved the meeting by leaving the chair.

In the confusion, Mr Cynic luckily made his escape from the chamber, although his retreat was accelerated in some little measure by the various missiles the Ladies threw after him, such as shoes, ridicules, ink-stands, &c. and in this state of riotous anarchy the members separated.

THE ITINERANT—No. VIII.

"A thing of shreds and patches."

POPULARITY.—What is vulgarly called popularity, is a drug so cheap in the political market, that it is unworthy the acceptance of a high-minded and honourable man. It may be obtained by sycupancy, double dealing, and by falsehood; it requires the exercise of no other talent than that of knavery and deception; the false patriot has nothing more to do than to make pompous promises, and to neglect to comply with these promises when made, and he will obtain vulgar popularity in abundance. Read popularity is a bird of a prouder plumage, and metaphorically speaking, may be said to belong to the avian genus—he wings his way to the centre of light and glory, while he bears plaudits from the gazing multitudes below; he is still gaining on the beams, and finally if he does not reside in the blaze, it is not for want of effort, but because he has no atmosphere, where he can exert the energies of his wings.

ORIGINAL SIN.—A Scotchman in New-Hampshire being sick, was called upon by a clergyman, who conversed with him upon his religious concerns. Said the minister, Do you repent of all your sins? Do you repent of Adam's first sin? "Adam! Adam!" said the sick Scotchman, "I never knew the man!"

INDOLENCE.—Whitmore, says Johnson, busies the mind without corrupting it, has at least this use, that it rescues the day from idleness, and he that is never idle, will not often be vicious.

THE PHILANTHROPIST.—Peace and comfort rest for evermore upon thy head! Thou enviedst no man's person or opinion. Thou blackenedst no man's character—devouredst no man's bread—for each one's sorrow thou hadst a tear—for each man's need thou hadst a charity.

MARRIAGE.—The Duke once said to Talford, (whom he had taken prisoner,) "the only difference between you and me is—I have committed a hundred faults, and you a hundred and one." And this, said an eminent statesman, often reveals the mysteries of war.

AGREABLE READING.—Mr. Hogg, in his life, tells us this anecdote of a man of Eskdalemuir. He had borrowed Bible's Dictionary from his neighbour, and on returning it the lender asked him what he thought of it. "I donna ken, man," replied he, "I have read it all through, but canna say that I understand it—it is the most confused book that I ever saw in my life!"

Stanzas by Dr. Goldsmith.

1 When lovely woman stoops to folly,
And fondly too late that men betray,
What charm can sooth her melancholy,
What art can wash her guilt away?

2 The only art her guilt to cover,
To hide her shame from every eye,
To give repentance to her lover,
And wring his bosom—is to die.

SUPPLEMENT.

1 Ah no! Compassion yet imploring,
With balmy lips shall sooth the sigh;
While pity beads with looks restoring,
The hapless maiden shall not die.

2 The thorn of guilt may pierce the sinner,
Repentance shall succeed the smart;
Religion's holy smile shall win her,
And Mercy heal the wounded heart.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

It is wonderful to see what a strange propensity mankind have for disputation, and what volumes of acrimonious controversy, have been produced by subjects of very small importance.—In looking over an old periodical work published nearly a hundred years ago, I was very much diverted by a learned disputation between a couple of correspondents, relative to the etymology of the name, the origin and pedigree, of the Louse—Upon this pestilent subject much "learned dust" was "kicked up" on both sides, in which all the maxims of physics and philosophy, and even the sacred volume itself, were brought into requisition, to prove the pro and con of the different sides. One of these wrangling philosophers asserted in round terms, that the animal was no part of the six days work of creation, "because," says he, "it was not expedient, nor was it compatible with the dignity and happiness of Adam and his fair consort, to have such a pestilent animal lodged about them; and it would not subsist any where but upon human bodies—besides, there is no account of its existence in the antediluvian world, nor of its entrance into the ark at the time of the deluge,—and the first account we have of it is in the miraculous production of "swarms of lice" in Egypt.—And he further maintains that combs were unknown before this period, and that scratching was an exercise which people had to learn since.—Having exhausted the powers of his rhetoric, his facetious antagonist, who seems to have been equally well read in philosophic and learned lore, takes up the matter and maintains it as a sacred truth, that God at the time of the creation, made all the beasts of the field and every creeping thing, the louse among the rest—and as Adam was created the same day, he thinks it was likely that the place assigned him for a habitation was upon father Adam's cranium, and that subsequently, when Adam was weary and in his blissful bower laid him down to rest with Eve, his faithful partner, by his side, to enjoy, as Milton says,

"The rites mysterious of connubial love."

Some of the numerous brood with which he was stocked, from a roving spirit, might have fixed their habitation among the flowing locks that adorned the head of Mrs. Eve, and as she began to increase and multiply, the same native desire of roving would transfer them to her offspring, and in like manner they have been transmitted from generation to generation to the present time, and will probably so continue as long as mankind exist.—To this account of a contest upon so interesting a subject, I beg leave to add a gratifying experiment, made by the celebrated Lovenhook, who being desirous (as philosophers generally are) of enriching science with facts, enclosed a pregnant female louse in a dirty black stocking, which he had wore upon his own leg, and in six days he found, it had deposited fifty nits or eggs, and from a dissection he discovered as many more in the ovary; from which he concludes, that in twelve days, it would have laid one hundred eggs—he ascertained that the eggs hatched in six days, and that they attained their full size in 18 days, and allowing one half to be females, which would in 12 days more deposit each 100 eggs, that would at the usual time of hatching, produce 5000 lice. So that in eight weeks a louse may become mamma and granny to no less than 3000 of its own descendants! no wonder, truly, that our lounging, lazy, dirty, lazarous scrubs, can boast of their thousands of cattle, ha?

FROM AN ENGLISH MAGAZINE.

COMFORTS OF AN INN.

A gentleman whose veracity may be depended upon, slept at the York Hotel, in the city of York, one morning in the month of May, 1822. Having been engaged with a party of friends, he did not retire till midnight; an hour which in that place is not considered untimely. Having taken his place by the Highflier, Sheffield Coach, which left York at half past eight the next morning, he gave express orders to be called at half past seven.—Having no dread of evil spirits, he straitway composed himself; but his rest was of short duration, for at one o'clock he was roused by a knocking at the door. "Who's there?" said the sleepy traveller. "Pray, Sir, don't you go by mail?" "No I go by the Highflier." "Beg your pardon, Sir, it's another gentleman. This unwelcome visitor robbed him of his next half hour's repose; but after many twistings and twinings, he slumbered again. Scarcely had Morpheus taken him into his service, ere a second voice saluted his ear. "Two o'clock, Sir, the Express will be off in half an hour." "What have I to do with the Express? I wish you would express yourself elsewhere." "Laws, Sir, I was told as how you went by the Express." "I told your master I was to go by the Highflier, and I hope I shall hear no more of you till half past seven." "I beg your pardon, Sir." Again he tumbled and tossed, and again he became subject to the son of Erebus; but, like poor Monsieur Tonson, he was doomed to be haunted. At half past three he heard a loud thundering at the door.—"Sir, I've brought your coach, you must be up in a moment, the coach is at the door." Out bounced the astonished guest, and quickly replied, "Why did you not speak before? I have had trouble enough with one or the other of you. Why did your master say the coach went at half past eight?" "Bless me, Sir, is it you as goes by the Highflier? they told me as how you went by the Nelson. Beg your pardon, Sir, am sure." In any place but York this would have been the last customer, but the fates had conspired. At five, hears another knocking, and his patience being exhausted, he exclaims, "What the d— do you want?" "Don't you go by the Highflier, Sir?" "To be sure I do." "Well, Sir, I'll be sure to call you at half past seven." Half-past seven arrived, and the gentleman made his appearance amidst a numerous assemblage of menials, all laden with petitions and apologies: "Please to remember the porter; please to remember the waiter, Sir; remember the boots, Sir; remember me, Sir, if you please, I'm the chambermaid, I called you, Sir." "Omnes, I beg pardon, Sir, for disturbing you." "Yes, I'll pardon you and remember you too, when I am many miles hence." "But don't you mean to see us nothing, Sir?" "Yes I do mean to give you nothing; and I'll remember you all as long as I live, you may rely upon it."

COLOMBIAN REPUBLIC.

Col. Burns, of the fast sailing schr. Midway, arrived at Baltimore in 14 days from Santa Martha, where she had sailed, an express of information from the Spanish General Morales had landed at Santa Martha with about 500 men, and had taken possession of the territory within the territory of the independent Indians, where he expected to be joined by the Coharian Indians; in this, however, he was disappointed—Gomez, their leader, being able to engage them in a new war with the patriots. It is said that in an assembly of the chiefs, he was fired upon, severely wounded, and with difficulty escaped with a few of his adherents, to the camp of Morales. The most effective measures had been taken by the patriots to entrap this remnant of the Spanish forces in the territory of the patriot officers at Santa Martha that was made that Morales would be taken.

From Quito—The most satisfactory accounts are daily arriving from the Guayaquil, where he was received with the greatest rejoicing, and the whole of that Province has joined Colombia—peace, tranquility and safety are everywhere established, and even the notorious Doctor Ximenez, Bishop of Puyo, who lately had been at the head of the Spanish forces, has become an adherent of the patriots, and has joined the cause of the independence, declaring in favor of American Liberty. The country is overstocked with goods, particularly dry goods, and country produce high and scarce.

The day the Midway sailed, news arrived from Santa Martha, that several Spanish privateers were all there and had made some captures. The news from Lima states the Spaniards in the neighborhood of Cuzco, to be very strong, and it was supposed they would shortly attack Santa Martha. Gen. Bolivar has sent about 3000 men from Guayaquil, under the command of Gen. Yalces, to the assistance of Gen. San Martin. Numerous agents have arrived at Santa Martha, from Europe, to contract for loans, &c. and a great many applications it is said, have been made for privileges for establishing steam boats on the Magdalena, Atrato; and several propositions have been made to the Colombian government to open a water communication with the South Sea, by the way of the Atrato river.

FROM CALCUTTA.

By the brig Charles, arrived at Boston, Calcutta papers to the 30th of April have been received.

It was reported the Mauritius Island was to be restored to the French by the English, in exchange for Corsica.

A fire at Surat destroyed 4000 huts, and property to the amount of 40 lacs.

The Cholera Morbus had made its appearance again in India.

On the King's Birth day, a number of prisoners were liberated at Calcutta, some of whom had been 30 years in confinement. The establishment of Telegraphs in India has been commenced.

It is determined in the East Indies to restore some old Canals, and make new ones. One of the former is 150 miles long. The Delhi Canal is 180 miles in length.

The ships of war, Ganges, 80, and Glasgow, 44, are expected in England from India, with upwards of $20,000,000. Thus specie finds its way back. The Marquis of Hastings was to come home in the Glasgow. The Ganges was at St. Helena, Aug. 10th.

There are now we believe two Bengalee newspapers published in Calcutta, under the management of learned Natives, one a rank Wing, we understand, and the other an ultra Tory; and a new paper, on the popular side, has made its appearance in the Hindoostany language.

Extract of a letter from a young Midshipman on board the U. S. ship of war Cyane, to a gentleman in Baltimore, dated St. Johns, Porto Rico, Sept. 8, 1822.

Went down on the 25th ult. after a passage of 21 days from Hampton Roads. Upon our first arrival here, I was astonished at the strength of this place. St. Johns is a town completely walled, mounting upwards of 600 guns, besides others lying ready when required. Notwithstanding this, our little Yankee band is not overawed, and the Captain does not hesitate to assert our rights in the most dignified manner. The inhabitants appeared to be inimical to us, on account of one of their privateers having been captured by the Grampus; but upon remaining here some time, they appear to have been reconciled to us. We have been visited by the Governor, and a large number of his officers, who appear to be extremely gratified with their visit, and the appearance of the ship was, to use their own expression, magnificent. The first day that we arrived, the captain sent to inform the Governor that a salute would be fired from the ship, if he would return it, gun for gun, to which he consented; but at the time appointed, they only returned 15 to our 21. The Captain demanded the remainder, and in about two hours after received them, which is a very rare thing, as they have refused to give satisfaction under the same circumstances, even to the English, who have been compelled to bear with it.

The Six Nations.—A few months ago a collection of sundry Indians of the Six Nations, met in council at Tomawanta, under the direction of the celebrated Red Jacket, and in their proceedings assumed in strong terms the missionaries, and we believe one or two schoolmasters, and one of the agents, employed by the whites to disseminate the lights of knowledge and the blessings of the Gospel, among that unfortunate race. By the last Buffalo Journal, we perceive that the Chiefs of the Six Nations met in council, during the past week, to receive their annuity from the United States; they pronounced the speech of Red Jacket, which was published in a hand-bill, a scandalous libel, made up of baseless falsehoods. Red Jacket, it seems, heads the Pagan party; and so far from there having been 2608 Indians at the Tomawanta meeting, the chiefs said there were no more than 120, including 32 British Pagan Indians, from Grand River, in Upper Canada—many of whom signed the hand-bill. It seems also that the names of several chiefs were signed to Red Jacket's hand-bill without their knowledge or consent. They say the motive which governed the authors of the libel, arises from an inveterate hatred against civilization, Christianity, and those who have exerted themselves in the introduction of these blessings among the Six Nations.

Murder.—The following circumstances relating to the murder in Allegany county, Md. on the 28th ult. are gathered from an eye witness:

It appears that Mr. Dunwoody, the deceased, who had lately emigrated from Ireland, rented a farm in Allegany county; that observing a number of stray horses on the farm (our informant thinks there were four) which had committed some injury by the trespass, he confined them; that a Mr. Cresap, who also lived in the neighborhood owned the horses, and sent his son to claim them; that he was met by young Dunwoody, a son of the deceased who consented, after some altercation, to return three of them, but insisted on retaining the fourth until restitution should be made; that Cresap insisted on this also being restored, and threatened to shoot him in case of further refusal. Dunwoody still declined giving him up, where Cresap returned home, took his rifle, and proceeded to put his threat in execution. On reaching the place, the elder Dunwoody, who had by this time joined his son, ordered him to begone, and advanced with a pitchfork to intimidate him. Cresap fired, and Dunwoody fell dead without speaking a word. Cresap's fortune instantly forsook him—he was frantic at what he had done, and called upon the surviving Dunwoody to take immediate revenge by shooting him also—He yielded without resistance to the persons who had collected, and was led away by them. Passing his father's, he obtained leave to enter the house unattended, for the purpose, as he said, of changing his clothing. Being thus free from his guards, he availed himself of the opportunity and made his escape.

A splendid Ball was given at the Pine Orchard, on the Catskill Mountains, New-York, on the 18th ult. The Ball Room is at an elevation of 2800 feet from the river. The room is 60 feet in length, and on this evening was beautifully decorated with the evergreens of the mountain. The Recorder says:

"At 7 the dance commenced, agreeably to the previous arrangements, attended by a large number of ladies and gentlemen of the first fashion and respectability, from the counties of Albany, Columbia, Dutchess and Green. The ancient solitude of the mountains seemed to have been driven from this her favorite abode and to have retreated to the higher and denser forests. None thought of sadness—"

"nor made the night a gloomy vigil, but a festive time, Merrier than day."

Nothing could be more enlivening than the appearance of this ample green arbour, radiant with life and beauty, resounding with music, and reflecting with its numerous lights the lively and animating features of its inmates. Coffee and refreshments were served in the course of the evening, and at 2 o'clock, the company retired to their respective lodgings. The pleasure depicted upon every countenance—the animation and joy which prevailed every where—and the striking display of beauty and taste—gave to this first attempt, the happiest and truest effect."

Singular Circumstance.—As a gentleman was returning from market in this place on Tuesday last, he had not proceeded above one hundred rods from the village, when to his astonishment his wagon was discovered to be on fire, and before he perceived it, the flames had already attacked the clothes of a Miss Dennis, who had taken passage for the country, and she narrowly escaped death; having her clothes in full blaze, with a high wind, she was literally stripped from top to toe, with a few fragments only remaining, and her body seriously burned—the gentleman wagoner fared something better, having only a severe burn on one hand. He returned home with his mutilated wagon, which is much damaged, but the lady who was the cause of the unhappy affair escaped without receiving much injury. She had on entering the vehicle just lighted her cigar or pipe, to be in vogue with our dandies, and unluckily and unperceived dropped fire into the combustibles of the wagon, which taking fire caused the unhappy disaster.—N. Y. Westchester Herald.

Products of the season.—A peach measuring 9½ inches in circumference, and weighing 8 7/8 ounces, grew in the garden of Mr. Jas. B. Nichols, of Alexandria, D. C. having been blown from the tree, during the storm on that day, before receiving its full growth.

A Squash is now growing in the garden of Mr. Nathaniel Webster, in Gorham, which measures 43 feet in circumference.

A Cucumber was raised in a garden in Portland, by Mr. John Young, which measured 23 inches in circumference, and weighed seven pounds and two ounces.—Portland Gaz.

An Apple weighing 22 ounces has been taken from a tree at Ulmerick, Maine.

An Apple has this season been taken from the orchard of Mr. John Swanton, jun. of Guilford, Conn. weighing 24 ounces, and measuring 15½ inches in circumference.

SLAVE TRADE.—A whole squadron of six armed vessels employed in this execrable traffic, fell into the hands of Sir R. Mends, being bravely attacked and captured by the boats of the Iphigenia and Myrmidon, under his orders, manned by about 150 seamen. No less than 1876 miserable negroes were released from bondage, and from the most cruel torture, by this generous and gallant exploit. Of these, 500 were unfortunately drowned by the upsetting of one of the prizes in a tornado, together with some of our countrymen who formed the crew. But with the exception of 200 who died on the passage to Sierra Leone, all the rest, amounting to nearly 1200, were landed safely at that settlement. It is to be remarked, that of the Slave traders taken, there was three under the French flag. This event, we trust, will throw a damp at least upon the wicked rapacity of those who carry on this detestable traffic.

MELANCHOLY.—A young man named Richard David, was lately bit by a rattlesnake, in Jackson county, Indiana, while in search of his horse in the woods, on which he intended to proceed a little way to be married. The bite was so fatal, that he appears to have died on the spot. Meanwhile the bride had made the necessary preparations for the union; the marriage party were assembled, and in merry mood, looking out for the approach of the expected bridegroom, when they received the intelligence of his death! The scene was in consequence changed; and the intended bride, with all who had assembled to witness the nuptials, repaired to the funeral, where, instead of mirth and festivity, all was gloom and sadness.

NATIVE TALENT.—The medal which was voted by the British Society of Arts, in London, to Mrs. Wells, of Weathersfield, Conn. (formerly Miss Woodhouse) for her ingenuity in manufacturing the straw hat which was some time ago carried to England, has lately been received by that lady. It is of perfectly pure silver, about the circumference and twice the thickness of a crown; with various emblematic devices, elegantly executed, on one side; and on the other a short inscription, stating who gave it, to whom it was given, and for what reason.

Singular Coupling.—A little boy, about 4 years old, whilst playing near the mouth of a well at Pine Hill, near Charleston, S. C. on the 14th ult. accidentally slipped and fell into the water. The well is from 37 to 38 feet deep. There he remained for some minutes, when a negro girl who was washing near, with admirable presence of mind descended by the bucket rope, and catching the child, she placed him safely in the bucket. She then climbed up by the stones, and carefully drew the unfortunate infant to the top of the well alive and safe.

POSTSCRIPT.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 4.
By the arrival of the fast sailing ship Panthea, Capt. Bennett, in 32 days from Liverpool, advices have been received from that port to the 1st of September. Some of the most interesting articles of intelligence are contained in the following paragraphs:

A letter to Lloyd's of August 8, states that the American squadron left Gibraltar that day for Minorca, to remove their naval depot from that place, in consequence of a premonitory order to that effect from the Spanish government.

Splendid Victory of the Greeks.
Paris papers of the 26th, give accounts of great successes of the Greeks. Chourchid Pacha had repulsed the Greeks on the 7th of July, but next day suffered a total defeat. Four of the Pachas were made prisoners. Chourchid Pacha was joined by the Pacha of Negropont of Larissa, and of Janina. His forces were estimated at 70,000 men, but a great part was but an undisciplined militia and brigands. The Greeks were commanded by Odyseus, Ypsilanti, Normann and Bazaris. Chourchid Pacha, who had sent to the Porte a tartar, to announce the extermination of the Greeks, was engaged imprudently in the defile of Zittoby (Thermopylae) at one side, and by those of Neopatri on the other. The Greeks had formed an ambuscade, and commenced the battle with the courage of true Spartans. The three Pachas were made prisoners, and Chourchid Pacha saved himself with 4000 men, on the side of Larissa. The loss of the Ottomans is computed at 30,000 men, that of the Greeks at 13,000. The consequences of this event are likely to be most important.

Two French vessels having arrived at Toulon, having on board 300 individuals (many of them women and children) the remnant of the garrison of Athens. Upwards of 600 men were put to the sword by the Greeks on the 10th of July, in spite of the promise they had made to give a safe conduct to the Mussulmans. The town was a prey to massacre for three days. The unfortunate men rescued, have been sent to the Pacha of Smyrna.

The reports by these vessels are, that a Turkish army had beaten the Greeks at Thermopylae, taken possession of Thebes, and approached Athens. The intelligence of this check seems to have been made a pretext by the Greeks to massacre the Turkish garrison, which they had promised to spare.

SPAIN.—The new ministry had called together the official persons, and declared that all who showed themselves but lukewarm in defence of the existing government, should be immediately dismissed. Some insurgents, headed by two bishops, continued to show themselves at Henda, and in the neighboring mountains. General Mina and other officers had gone to resume their command at different stations, and the most strenuous efforts were making to place the army on the most respectable, and efficient footing.

Portugal was about to send an army of 12,000 men, to cover the left bank of the Ebro, and another of 8,000 men, to protect the frontiers on the side of Galicia, Coosie and Estramadura, to discount projects and intrigues. Every where, the inhabitants were active in assisting the militia and the regulars, in putting down the few insurgents who continued to show a disposition to disturb the public tranquillity.

By advices from Madrid to the 15th Aug. the Queen was extremely ill from continued nervous attacks. It was asserted before the departure of the courier, that she had demanded the viaticum. The King appears to be a captive in his palace. The trials of the officers of the royal guard, charged with carrying arms against the constitution, are in progress. One of them, Lieut. Goffien, has been found guilty, and condemned to death.

The celebrated Wouler, (Black Dwarf) has been released from Warwick prison—his term of imprisonment, (for a libel) having expired. A public dinner was given him at Manchester, in honor of the event, on the 29th of July, a humorous account of which is given in the London Sun. The procession, it is said, was attended by many of his tried friends.

A Society of the Carbonari, is said recently to have been discovered at Paris, with the object of overturning the existing government, by fomenting insurrections in different parts of the kingdom, which they hoped would ultimately become general.

Secret Societies, having revolutionary objects in view, are stated to have been discovered in Prussia. They were composed of the students of the universities, who held a meeting in September, 1820, when, after many days discussion, they adopted as a motto the words, "Freedom, Honour, and Equality." The association was no longer confined, as it had been, to German students, but was extended to foreigners, and thus a way opened to fraternization with similarly disposed students in France, Poland, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Italy, &c. and from that time the number of travelling students to propagate the principles of the association, had increased.

The punishment for being connected with these societies was death; but the King of Prussia is said to have for this time, suffered mercy to supersede justice by commuting the penal sentence into some months imprisonment in a fortress. The Morning Chronicle, alluding to the existence of Secret Societies says, they "may be considered a certain sign of bad government—Men never betake themselves to secret meetings till they are prevented from speaking out openly. We hear of no secret societies in the United States, and it hardly requires the gift of prophecy to foretell that there never will be any there, so long as the government remains what it is, the fair organ of the public will." [Happy would it be, too, for our country, if it was free from factious demagogues and unprincipled men, who rush forward for office and emolument, and sometimes deceive the people by their fair professions! let the public beware of such, and they secure the great palladium of their liberty.]

The Fame, a very valuable ship from Calcutta and Madras, to London, carrying more than 1000 tons of goods, was totally wrecked on the 14th of June at the Cape of Good Hope, and eight persons perished. Another valuable ship, called the Gracer, from New South Wales for England, was accidentally burnt on the 1st of June at the Cape.

The long and anxiously expected drawing Room of the King, was held on the 21st of August—being the first "Royal squeeze" that has been held in Edinburgh during the last hundred and fifty years.

The London Courier contradicts the rumour of an attempt to assassinate the King of Sweden. There was not the slightest truth in the report.

It is mentioned in the London Statesman, (edited by Cobbett) that while Mr. Hume was making his speech and estimates which we noticed some days since, relative to the Sinking Fund and National Debt, there were but ten members present on the ministerial side of the House, and but nine on the other side—making nineteen, and including the speaker, a single score, out of thirty-three score and eight! This fact shows that while the ministe-rials did not fear Mr. Hume much, the opposition did not care even as much for him.

A merchant at Perth has invented a new machine for fishing Oysters, the power of which is so great, that one man can do as much with it, as ten in the ordinary way.

The King of England was to embark from Scotland on the 29th, on his return to London.

The Geography of the World
IN general, and of the United States in particular, rendered easy and familiar in a course of fifteen, or twenty five Lectures, (each one hour and a half), in the large hall of the Writing Academy, near the Post Office. Price, Two Dollars for the whole course, (given at entrance). Ladies and Gentlemen may attend in different classes, every day, or every other day, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 8 o'clock in the evening. Other arrangements will be made to suit all who apply.

The improved plan of these Lectures will render the different countries as familiar as the streets and squares of Philadelphia are to its citizens, or as the fields and lots of a plantation are to those who frequently walk over and survey them with the eye. The plan is the result of long attention to the subject, and much preparation, by drawing the largest and boldest featured Maps that were probably ever seen in the United States before.

On these, the learner surveys Oceans, Continents, Islands, Mountains, Rivers, Empires, States, and Kingdoms, as a wide extended landscape from a lofty elevation. By this means the mind comprehends them without an effort—they make a pleasing and lasting impression on the memory.

N. B. It is not necessary to commence on any particular day, though, the sooner persons commence, the longer time will they have to go through the Course.—The Lessons, in Writing, are now attended by between two and three hundred, with a daily and hourly increase—and, as a proposal, for the last time of my teaching in Philadelphia, at least for many years, the respectable citizens are informed, that all who commence, between this and the 10th of October, may attend as much as they please (either at the GEOGRAPHICAL LECTURES or LESSONS in WRITING), according as they engage for) until the end of six weeks from this date, and no additional charge will be made after the small amount of entrance money.—The Writing Department will still receive that strict attention which a liberal patronage seems to demand. net 5—3f

THE OLIO.

"Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour."

From the New Monthly Magazine.

THE MILK MAID AND THE BANKER.

A Milk-Maid with a very pretty face,
Who lived at Acton,
Had a black cow, the ugliest in the place,
A crooked back'd one,
A beast as dangerous too, as she was frightful,
Vicious and spiteful.

And so confirmed a trust, that she bounded
Over the hedge daily, and got pounded.
'Twas all in vain to the her with a tether,
For then both cord and cow elop'd together.

And with an oaken bough, (what folly!)
It should have been of birch, or horn, or holly)
Patty one day was driving home the beast,
Which had as usual slipped its anchor,
When on the road she met a certain banker,
Who stopp'd to give his eyes a feast.

By gazing on her features, crimson'd high
By a long low-chance in July.

"Are you from Acton, pretty lass?" he cried;
"Yes," with a curtsy, she replied;
"Why then you know the laundress, Sally Wrench?"

"She is my cousin, sir, and next door neighbor."
"That's lucky—I've a message for the wench,
Which needs dispatch, and you may save my labor,
Give her this kiss, my dear, and say I sent it,
But mind you owe me one—I've only lent it."

"She shall know," cried the girl, as she brandish'd
Her bough,
"Of the loving intentions you have me—
But as to the kiss, as there's haste, you'll allow
That you had better run forward, and give it my cow."

For she, at the rate she is scampering now,
Will reach Acton some minutes before me."

ON THE MARRIAGE OF A DANDY.

With hair betwixt various ways,
His body straiten'd by stiff stays;
With miening gait, and all his tones
Broken by gentle sighs and moans;

His cheeks and lips with rouge all glowing,
See Cerberus in the altar going,
Who leads, but yet appears to linger,
The lady by her little finger!

The priest astonish'd at the while,
Could scarce suppress or hide his smile,
Then whisper'd to the Clerk aside,
"Which of the Misses is the Bride?"

DANGEROUS THREAT.—A gay spark, who Had taken up lodgings at a public house in London, and got considerably in debt, absent-ed himself and took new quarters.

This so enraged the landlord, that he commissioned his wife to go and dun him;
which the debtor hearing of, he declared publicly, that if she came, he would kiss her.

"Will he, (quoth the lady) will he?
give me my bonnet, Molly, I'll see whether any fellow on earth has such impudence." "My dear," said the cooling husband, pray don't be so rash—you don't know what a man may do when he is in a passion."

GENUINE ANECDOTE.—A "good natured"
Irishman who had an unfortunate propensity of diurnally solacing himself with the ardent, was one day lectured by a real friend, on his taking thus frequently his solitary glass. The reply was—"By St.
Patrick, how can I help it; when I am alone, the bottle comes so quickly round to me."

THE CHARITABLE HIGHWAYMAN.—It was said of Boulter (a better sort of highwayman) that one day riding on horseback on the high road, he met a young woman who was weeping, and who appeared to be in great distress. Touched with compassion, he asked what was the cause of her affliction, when she told him, without knowing who he was, that a creditor, attended by a bailiff, had gone to a house which she pointed out, and threatened to take her husband to prison for a debt of thirty guineas.

Boulter gave her the thirty guineas, telling her to go pay the debt, and set her husband at liberty; and she ran off loading
the honest gentleman with benedictions.
Boulter, in the mean time, waited on the road till he saw the creditor come out; he then attacked him, and took back the 30 guineas, besides every thing else he had about him.—Memoirs of a Traveller now in retirement.
